In-person user research at Wood Green Library

User testing aims and approach

The purpose of our visit

The purpose of Invuse visiting Wood Green Library was to speak to residents that are coming into Haringey council customer service centre in person.

The guerilla survey was a way of collecting quick easy data from users to find out why they have come in person, while the card sorting activity was a way to tap into this demographic and test if they have the same understanding of the website as the more digitally savvy users.

Across the 4 hour workshop, we managed to speak to 34 users.

It is essential that the project is to be informed by the residents of Haringey at every stage. It is also vital that we make sure we reach users that are perhaps not able to self-serve online and find out why, and if we can make changes to encourage and help those users to transact digitally in the future.

Guerilla testing

Survey questions

The method for guerilla testing was to speak to residents waiting in the customer service centre and ask a brief set of simple questions around their reason for visiting.

- If they checked the website before they came in person?
- why they ended up coming in person?
- if they didn't check the website, why?
- if they ever use the Haringey Council website?
- what they think of the website?

Guerilla testing

Did users try the website before coming in person?

Guerilla testing

Service relating to query

- Housing 39.3%
- Parking (visitor vouchers) 17.9%
- Parking (permits) 10.7%
- Benefits 21.4%
- Library 7.1%
- Council Tax 3.6%

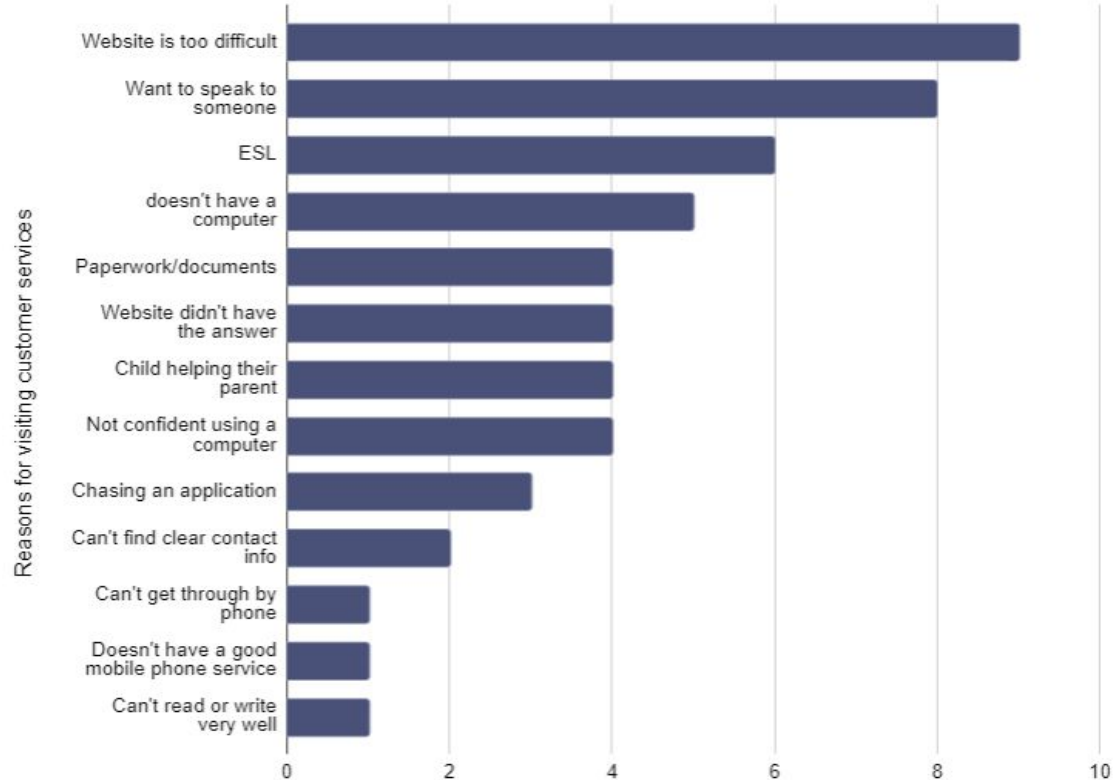

Guerilla testing

Reason for visit

The main reasons residents were visiting customer services were:

- the website was too difficult to navigate
- they felt they needed to speak to someone to resolve their issue
- they didn't speak English as a first language
- they didn't have a computer

Guerilla testing

Recurring reasons for visit

The following reasons for visiting the customer service centre were mentioned more than once during testing (in no particular order).

- Parking permits
- Parking visitor vouchers
- Rent queries
- Handing in or collecting paperwork
- Checking the status of an application
- Getting help with an eviction notice
- Getting help with Housing Benefit Award Accuracy Initiative

Card sorting activity

Card sorting activity

Alongside the guerilla testing, Invuse carried out a card sorting activity at the library. Passing residents were free to come over and take part in the sorting exercise.

The activity included a set of cards displaying service information, and required the resident to sort the information into groups under headings. The option to suggest headings or place items in a group marked 'I don't know' were also available.

The purpose of the activity was to uncover any areas within the information architecture of the website where users don't think in the same way as the council staff. In order to help inform the new LGD website so that it is user led.

Card sorting activity

Research findings

From the cards sorts that were conducted there were some repeated findings, which have been documented on this page and the next.

- The majority of users struggled with the 3 areas:
 - Adult social care
 - Health and Wellbeing
 - Children, young people and families

Claiming that there were a lot of crossovers. 'disability and sensory loss' as well as 'alcohol support' were most commonly placed in 'health and wellbeing'. Users reported being confused and not knowing which to choose before placing the cards. Some residents also suggested that they didn't understand the term 'adult social care'.

Recommendation: Consider merging 'adult social care' and 'health and wellbeing' to be 'health and social care' like Bracknell Forest Council or 'health and caring for someone'

- Environmental health caused some issues when it came to understanding what it contained. Users were certain that it covered 'air pollution' and 'climate change', but not so certain about anything else.

Recommendation: Consider splitting the reporting/clean up side of environment and the environmental action side. For example 'environmental impact' or just 'environment' and another theme for reporting environmental emergencies in the borough.

- For services like ‘reporting dog fouling’ and ‘street sweeping’ users wanted to see a general waste disposal/clean up heading and didn’t find the options of ‘bins and recycling’ or environmental health’ or ‘community, safety and emergencies’ that helpful.

Recommendation: As mentioned above, it would be helpful to have a theme for reporting or looking up environmental emergencies in the borough. Or renaming ‘community, safety and emergencies’ to ‘emergencies’ or ‘environmental safety and emergencies’. This could also include ‘reporting a tree problem’. Users frequently commented on having no idea where this went. It was placed in a different area each time.

- The majority of users did place ‘building control’ within ‘planning’.
- Only half the users felt that ‘homelessness’ should sit under ‘housing’. Some stated this didn’t feel right. One user felt this should come under a new heading, and another felt it was a health issue.
- Users didn’t understand the term ‘consultations’ or ‘strategies and policies’.

Recommendation: These are very council jargon terms. Could they be updated to include user language. For example, ‘have your say’ or ‘council future plans’

- There were numerous crossovers within ‘education and schools’ and ‘children, young people and families, which were expected.

Recommendation: To ensure these areas in particular are well sign posted to one another.
